It's our hammiest ever Stamp issue

Our second pictorial Post & Go Stamp series has already looked at six fascinating breeds of Sheep, so we are delighted to introduce the next issue in the series, which examines the very singular breeds of pig to be found on Britain's farms. As with all of the pictorial Post & Go issues so far, it features delightful illustrations by Robert Gillmor. And don't forget to look out for the final part of the series — Cattle, still to come later in 2012.

Perfect pigs
All six stamps are printed in a vertical strip and overprinted with First Class values. The Pigs Stamps are supplied in a card carrier complete with detailed information about each breed.

Pigs British Farm Animals II

Berkshire
One of the UK's oldest breeds, the Berkshire is said to have originated from the English Cotswolds in the mid 17th century. The modern Berkshire is a double pig, ideal for confectionery. It is black with six white points: feet, nose and tail.

Welsh
The Welsh came to prominence in the 1970s when it was identified as one of the three major breeds in which the modern pig industry should be based. White, upright and renowned for its well-developed ham, it is the same pig of Wales.

Gloucestershire Old Spot
The world's oldest pedigree spotted pig, the Gloucestershire Old Spot probably originated from crossing a Gloucestershire with a Berkshire. Originally known as the Oxford pig, the breed likes to graze orchards for walled apples.

Tamworth
Believed to be the oldest living relative of the English Forest Pig, the Tamworth originates in Leicestershire in the early 19th century. A single breed that thrives outdoors, it has a distinctive coloring ranging from pure ginger to red-brown.

British
Also known as the British Landrace, this breed has been bred to export to the USA. It is the most common pig in the UK.

Royal Mail Post & Go postage overprint
The Queen created by Anne Macdonald that appears on UK definitive stamps. In 2010, pictorial Post & Go designs were introduced.
